SONOP, NAMIBIA

A sophisticated safari escape for the modern explorer.

The latest addition to the impressive and ever-expanding Zannier Hotels portfolio is Sonop, a luxurious tented camp nestled in the stunning Namib Desert. Designed to echo the refined style of a 1920s explorer's camp, the retreat exudes old-world elegance, with sumptuous furnishings of ornate antiques, colourful rugs and rich woods. Of course, it is the boundless surroundings that are most awe-inspiring; guests are encouraged to make the most of the enthralling desert landscape, with activities such as sunrise drives, outdoor yoga, wildlife safaris and hot air ballooning on offer.

FREQUENT FLYER Arnaud Zannier, Founder of Zannier Hotels

What are your top three in-flight essentials?
Comfortable clothes, good headphones and the latest travel and lifestyle magazines.

Describe your airport style?
Very casual: I always fly wearing a tracksuit, t-shirt and a pair of sneakers.

How do you pass the time on a long-haul flight?
Mostly by reading the news, sometimes watching movies and often trying to get some sleep to start early the next day on my arrival.

What is the first thing you do when you land in a new city?
Have a shower and change clothes, then start the meeting straight away!

What are three things you look for in a hotel?
I seek out warm interiors filled with vibes and emotions, honest service and most importantly, a comfortable bed.

Where are you most looking forward to travelling to next?
I really would love to go back to Japan and take the time to properly explore its incredible culture. It's truly unique.

What is one destination that you never tire of?
England, both London and the countryside. I love it all. I might end up living there one day.

What is currently the most underrated destination in the world in your opinion?

There are a lot of places that are on the map but not on peoples' radar. For me, one of those is the island of Menorca. We have been working on a project there for four years already, and it is getting clearer and clearer. But it will still need a couple of more years before it's ready. It truly is a beautiful island!
